

Three Rs Jingle

The conclusion, wrapped up in the Three Rs.

When my writing's nearly done, three little Rs will make it strong.

Our number one, restate.

Say the thesis a different way.

Exchange some words, rearrange the flow.

Keep the big points so the reader still knows.

Our number two, refer.

Point back to the proof you gave.

Don't list every fact all over again.

Save his evidence, these details, and bring it back in.

Restate, refer, reflect.

Three little Rs I won't forget.

Restate the point, refer to the proof, then reflect and tell the big truth.

Our number three, reflection.

Now take that thinking in a big direction.

Lesson, moral, theme, or thought.

What's the big idea this writing taught?

Here comes the moment, get ready for flight.

Blue bird moment, make it take flight.

It leaves my tree, flies tree to tree, because this thought isn't only for me.

Restate, refer, reflect.

That's how conclusions make an effect.

Say it again, point back to the proof, then give everyone the lasting truth.

Blue bird flying tree to tree.

Make it matter to you and me.

Three Rs, close it right.
